POLITICAL BRIEFS

State ordered to shrink prison population by 44,000 – In a historic move, a panel of three federal judges today ordered the state of California to reduce its prison population by more than 40,000 inmates in the next two years. Sacramento Bee article; Dan Walters column; LA Times article; San Francisco Chronicle article

State keeps hiring despite recession – California's state government has managed to add thousands of jobs during the past year, defying a mammoth budget deficit and a brutal recession. San Jose Mercury News article

Whither the Williamson Act? – One of the odder victims of the budget signed by Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger is the Williamson Act which helps keep farm and ranch lands from being sold and, potentially, developed. California's Capitol blog

Field Poll: California GOP hasn't kept pace with changing demographics -- The California Republican Party has failed to keep pace with the state's evolving demographics over the past 30 years, signaling further trouble for a party that has been slipping in popularity, according to a poll released Tuesday. AP article; Sacramento Bee article

Older, whiter and settled down – This morning brings the latest in a series of studies that shows how different the people who actually vote in California are from the state's population as a whole. It also shows how different those voters are than the ones who cast ballots 30 years ago. Capital Notes blog

Jim Boren: Should we legalize pot to balance the state budget? – Get ready for the California marijuana wars coming to a ballot box near you. Supporters of a movement to legalize pot in California have filed a ballot measure with the state attorney general's office that would allow adults 21 and over to possess up to an ounce of marijuana. Boren in Fresno Bee Opinion Talk

State senators to consider changing law on student scores, teacher evaluations -- In an effort to qualify for federal 'Race to the Top' funds, the Senate's education committee plans to look at a 2006 law that bars use of test scores to evaluate teacher performance. LA Times article

New GI bill changed for California – California veterans who attend private college or graduate school will receive tuition support from the Post 9/11 GI Bill, thanks to an agreement between the state and the Department of Veterans Affairs. San Francisco Chronicle article

Kern trustee sued over Prop 8 sign scuffle – Rob Badewitz filed a civil lawsuit against Kern High School District Trustee and local "Yes on 8" Chairman Ken Mettler July 10 over their infamous sign scuffle last year. A preliminary hearing is set for next month. Bakersfield Californian article

DUIs cloud Sal Quintero's political future -- Former Fresno City Council Member Sal Quintero recently pleaded guilty to his second drunken-driving charge in as many years, clouding his political future. Fresno Bee article

Vote on California marine preserves roiled by board shake-up -- An unexpected layer of political drama has been added to the controversy over 30 proposed ocean preserves off the California coast; Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger on Tuesday added a voting member to the commission that will decide the fate of the preserves. Sacramento Bee article

State Dems unveil water bills – With the clock running out on the legislative year, Democrats on Tuesday made the opening move in the latest round of state water negotiations -- unveiling five bills they said would "restore the Sacramento-San Joaquin River Delta and create a more reliable water supply for California." Fresno Bee article; San Diego Union-Tribune article

Delta group details irk community – Four of the seven members of a proposed Delta Stewardship Council would be appointed by Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger under legislation unveiled Tuesday, advancing fears that such a council, if formed, would endorse a peripheral canal by the end of next year. Stockton Record article

San Joaquin air officials ask public to police itself – "We have a great number of rules, but we are getting near the point where people really need to step up and do things voluntarily," San Joaquin Valley Air Pollution Control District spokesman Anthony Presto said. Stockton Record article

10 more Atwater teachers lose jobs with new school year just around the corner – Ten teachers in the Atwater Elementary School District were laid off Tuesday night, bringing the total number of laid-off educators in the district to 30, Assistant Superintendent David Diaz Duran said. Merced Sun-Star article

Builders sue Bakersfield; Thomas money at core -- A lawsuit against a recent increase in traffic impact fees spells out what's lurking at the core of the dispute: the city's need for local matching funds for $630 million of federal transportation money Bakersfield's retired congressman secured before leaving office. Bakersfield Californian article

Merced starts program to help first-time homebuyers – In the coming months, the Merced city government will spend close to $1.5 million to help about 50 residents buy their first home. The money comes from the Neighborhood Stabilization Program. Merced Sun-Star article

State prepares for climate change – The first statewide plan in the country calls for adaptation and education. Public comment is sought. LA Times article

Modesto garbage fees could change – The City Council votes tonight on whether to reset garbage collection fees. If approved, the maximum residential bill would drop from $23.27 to $22.37 monthly. Commercial rates would go up, with maximum bills increasing to $41.29 from $39.34. Modesto Bee article

Valley shoppers buck U.S. trend toward shopping -- Nationwide, shoppers opened their wallets wider in May and in June, increasing their spending for two straight months -- but the uptick doesn't appear to be happening in the Valley. Fresno Bee article

SBA-backed startups failing in north Valley – At least 95 businesses defaulted on more than $5.2 million in SBA- guaranteed loans in Stanislaus, San Joaquin and Merced counties from January 2007 to May 2009. Modesto Bee article

Kohl's to hire 120 for new store in Merced -- Kohl's is seeking 120 workers for a new store scheduled to open in Merced in September. Fresno Bee article

Stockton Record: A blow to downtown Stockton – The failure of the Lexington is a hard knock to downtown. But the economy won't be in a slump forever, and the investments in the city's core will pay dividends - eventually. Unfortunately, no one can be certain when. Stockton Record editorial

Stockton council to consider investigation of firing of deputy city manager – Mayor Ann Johnston said Tuesday that the City Council next week will consider ordering an independent investigation into the firing of Deputy City Manager Johnny Ford. Stockton Record article

Lodi Unified extends chief's contract – Lodi Unified Superintendent Cathy Nichols-Washer was awarded a one-year contract extension, the Board of Trustees announced Tuesday night in a swell of support for the district's leader. Stockton Record article

Modesto superintendent's contract, enrollment tackled – Modesto City Schools trustees spent most of Monday night's meeting hearing from staff and the public about a proposal that allows students ages 12 to 18 to leave school for confidential medical services without parental consent. Modesto Bee article

Lodi Unified approves cell phone towers for campuses – Despite one school board member's concerns regarding student health and a passionate plea to delay voting on the issue until the public could be informed, the Lodi Unified School District has approved allowing unidentified companies to erect cell phone towers on two local campuses. Lodi News-Sentinel article

Tulare supervisors consider adding restrictions, fees to 'fringe' vendors -- Mobile-food vendors, junk peddlers, fortune tellers and the operators of strip clubs and festivals could soon have another layer of regulations to deal with. The Tulare County Board of Supervisors is considering a package of ordinances aimed at "fringe" businesses. Visalia Times-Delta article

Dairies to get more for milk – Tulare County dairy producers should see an increase in milk profits starting next month. Visalia Times-Delta article

Visalia Times-Delta: Rail line is an uncertain buy – Postponing its decision on whether to endorse the recovery of an abandoned rail line in southern Tulare County was probably the only sensible course available to the Visalia City Council this week. Visalia Times-Delta editorial
